COLONEL TABB'S SPEECH

owerful and Pathetic Appeal of the Vet teran Attorney in Behalf of Mr. Ashby. Judge Mann to Speak Today. When Judge Lee took his seat on the seach yesterday morning and the voice of Sheriff Curils was heard announcing that the proceedings of the day were about to begin, the crowd in the court-toom exceeded in numbers that of an he played years ago in this almost tranic druma, there is something in the man that commands respect and touches the chords of sympathy.

Representative Montague, who came from Richmond to reply to statements made on the witness stand concenting the advice given by him with respect to the alleged confession of Gamme, which Mr. Bridgeforth desired should be sworn to, was present when court opened. He briefly explained his position touching the matter as Mr. Briligeforth had done it the day before. It would be sufficient, he thought to swear that the confession was gratine, which he believed that the gentlemen who had the paper would do at the proper time. In cient, he thought, to swear that the confession was gentaine, which he besileved that the gentlemen who had the paper would do at the proper time. In this Mr. Montague is supported by every layer at the bar. The reference made to his moral conduct on that occasion has been sharply commended upon and unanimously repudiated. His private record is one of which he has not the least reason to be ashamed.

As Mr. Montague: The bustle which for a moment ran through the chamber caused. The argument was about to begin and every man in that crowd with its scores of ears wide open wanted to hear it. All through the case Mr. Garrett had watched counsel on the other side with an eye as quick and searching as that of an eagle. He had not only met their points with facts and forceful argument, but had ably defended the sealed in behalf of the commonwealth. In off-hand speeches he drove in his Negal nails and clinchely them well, and now he began to sum up the facts and lay them before the jurars. He took up-the witnesses one by one, dissected their testimony, showed the lasts with the same hearts which no man could misunderstand, painted the erms ould misunderstand, painted the erms that Witham H. Bridgeforth had been robbed by it of home, and wife, possessions and friends, and driven forth into the world without a hope for the future. And then he closed with an eloquent appeal to the furors to do his client justice. He spoke till the hour for recess orrived. Mr. Garrett made a fine impression upon those who heard him Indeed, he has won many plaudits since the trial began by reason of the celerity with which he has mastered puzzling problems.

the trial began by reason of the celevity with which he has mastered puzzling problems.

Court reconvense at 2:30 o'Cock and Mr. Causey addressed the jury. With the confidence of a man travelling a branch of evidence back to their starting point. He took up Mr. Gabett's sieling, hammer arguments and cleverly answered them. He invoked the faw and fitted it into the evidence in a manner which showed that he knew bis work and how to perform it. Mr. Causey is one of the most graceful speakers at the bar. He is a master o' words and knows how to bring them together in forceful and chythmical union. He spoke until nearly 4 o'clock.

Colone: Tailo followed. It had been a long time since the people of Hampton had heard the veteran attorney before a jury, but they will remember his speech of yesterday long after the lips from which it fell age silent in death. His eyes sparkled as he stood for a moment or two in the lopen space at the right of the bench before he began to speak. And then he spoke as if his words were the words of life or deathas if his own life were in the balance and the twelve men sitting before him were to drop in the welgth which shouly give him joy and peace or plungs him beneath a raging terrent of ruin. As he went on deeper and deeper into this were tengthening story of sin, holding up facts as they appeared in his client's favor, he made one feet that after all that has been said about him since the trial began, the man who set in the bar, a prisoner charged with a grave offense, couth not be gulity of the crime for which he was being tried. In a manner which showed thorough familiarity with every fact in the case, however trifling, he rehearsed the story and portayed in eloquent terms the weakness of the commonwealth. Then a flood of emotion seemed to rise from his heart. His white locks quivered in the fading light of day and as the shadows slowly-came to take its place he burst forth in sin appeal for justice, not for mercy, whose pathetic echoes filed the gloomy chamber and touched the hearts of those around him. He soke of the shame, bet sorrow only degradation street to follow conviction—of wife and home and little ones, and drew a picture of pity, and stated, for away in the marky distance, songs of love. The speech was that of a man who felt that all he said was true. In closing he told the jurors in a voice tremulous with emotion that he might never again appear before a jury. Then he sait down.

Women the Best Conversers

Of one thing there can be very little doubt, and that is the greater readiness in conversation of women than men. woman can create conversation which is a very useful thing, and is frequently found a great social difficulty.

If we give a man a subject on which he knows anything at all, unless he be a fool or morbidly reticent, he can talk about it so as to make himself fairly intelligible and perhaps interest-ing to those for whom the subject has any interest at all. Men, when their feeling of enthusiasm is excited, throw off the slowness and hesitation which frequently camp their power in society, just as they throw off the physical in-firmity of stuttering under the influence of some awakening theme or some strong sympathy. But the power of conversation in some women, and not always those of remarkable ability, is the very art of making bricks without the very art of making bricks without straw. They will talk to one by the hour about nothing—that is, on no par-ticular subject and with no particular object, and talk coherently and not foolishly and withal very pleasantly all the time. It would, we are free to confess, be rather difficult for the lis-tener to carry away with him any men-tal notes of what has been said; he may not be conscious of having gained any new ideas or of having had his old ones much enlarged; but he will rise and go his way, as one does after a light and wholesome meal, sensibly cheered and refreshed, but retaining n troublesome memories of the ingred ients which have composed it.

NEW YOEK, Feb. 17.—The most important feature in today's stock market was that the leavy liquidation, terday was not resumed. There was agressive pressure by the bears at times, but they refrained from leaving their contracts open and their covering before line close brought prices back to near the high level of the day. N. I gains resulted, fractional for the most part, but extending to a point in some cases. Quotations received their morning from Loudon showed the prices of Americans there substantially above the prices here last night, but that simply meant that delines from yesterday's Loudon closing had not fully reached yesterday afternoom's heavy declines here after the London exchange had closed. The buying in London which served to sustain prices were on called orders from New York and represented the covering of shorts part in this market. The opening here was at or above the London parts from New York and represented dimendiately after the londering before they fell to last night's close and the market failed, but fell to the lowest before noon on the disqueleting reports emanating from Key West that evidence had been destroyed by a torpedo explosed outside the ship.

The total sales of stocks today were 18,700 shares.
